CROWDED CONDITIONS, SHORTAGE OF GUARDS BLAMED BY WARDEN FOR RIOT AT EASTERN "PEN"; DAMAGE UNKNOWN

Situation Reported Well Under Control; Usual Privileges Restored to Inmates — Debris Being Cleaned Up—Some Prisoners Placed in Solitary Confinement — Investigate to Determine The Ring-Leaders

(By International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—Crowded conditions that forced him to place as many as four prisoners in a cell, and the shortage of guards, were blamed today by Warden Herbert J. Smith for the general riot staged by convicts at the 103 year old Eastern Penitentiary last night.

While guards cleaned up the debris of burning mattresses and broken furniture, Warden Smith segregated about 10 prisoners, placed several of them in solitary confinement and began an investigation to determine whom the ring leaders were.

Pennsylvania State Troopers patrolled the prison grounds and cell corridors, but Warden Smith reported the situation was quiet and well under control.

As the situation returned to normal later in the morning, the warden restored the usual privileges to the inmates and rescinded a previous order to hold them all locked in cells for the day.

Most of the furniture, smashed to provide kindling wood for fires which they started by thrusting burning mattresses into the corridors, the prisoners spent the night in cells flooded by water from high pressure hose manned by city firemen.

Prison authorities were able to make an immediate estimate of the damage which however, was not expected to be great.

A group seized Herbert J. Smith, warden of the prison, and beat him severely with a piece of steel bar wrenched from a cot before the guards rescued him.

Wardens and guards, blocked from the cell tiers by the barricade of flaming mattresses, strove futilely to subdue the bedlam of shouting, cursing and hammering on cell bars and windows. Several of the felons had to be removed from their cells to save them from suffocations.

As police raced to the prison and flung a guard around it to prevent any convicts going over the walls, firemen were summoned and entered the buildings, playing battering streams from hose lines up and down the corridors and into the cells.

The convicts kept their clamor for a time but finally called surrender and prison officials took charge.

Officials said the ringleaders in the outbreak were all long-termers and were known as "bad actors." None of the inmates escaped, guards said after a hasty check-up.

Six of the 1603 prisoners in the penitentiary and several guards were taken to the infirmary with injuries suffered in the hand to hand fighting. A dozen firemen were overcome by smoke while attempting to extinguish the burning mattresses.

More than 100 men identified by prison authorities as the ringleaders were segregated today. Ten of them were placed in "solitary." All prisoners remained locked up in their cells. They were served their meals by guards.

The damage was expected to amount to several thousand dollars, Warden Smith said. Prisoners broke up furniture in their cells and threw it into the corridors together with mess kits and personal apparel to increase the intensity of the flames.

About 100 state police from Reading, Harrisburg, Langhorne, Pottstown and Norristown, were bivouacked at the penitentiary this morning.

The riot broke out shortly after mess time last night when the prisoners were ordered locked in their cells for displaying an arrogant attitude towards Warden Smith who made a speech while they were eating and ordered them to "behave."

The prisoners were marched from the mess hall without being permitted to finish their meals. Several were believed to have hidden knives in their blue denim blouses.

The bedlam began at 7.30 and for the next three hours the prisoners held the upper hand.

The high pressure hose of the firemen that pinned the rioters against the cell walls was generally credited with breaking the backbone of the riot.

Warden Smith in an official statement today blamed the antiquated buildings, lack of space and shortage of guards for the outbreak.

He said every prison block except those housing Negroes participated in the riot.

TAMPICO OIL FIELDS MENACED

Tampico, Mexico, Sept. 27.—The rich oil fields of Tampico, ravaged by hurricane and flood waters, were menaced again today by a new rise in the waters of Tampico and Tamesi rivers. General Macias, military commandant here, who has been heading relief work, sent a wireless to President Rodriguez in Mexico City, advising him of the new threat to the safety of survivors. The water rose again in the inundated streets of the city as rescue workers strove to care for the hundreds of injured in the disaster and probed in the ruins for bodies of additional dead. The definitely established dead in Tampico and Cerdanas stood at 78, this being the number of bodies recovered. Rescue workers expressed fear that many remained buried in the ruins in inundated areas where exploration has not yet been possible. In addition, many persons were believed washed out into the river and drowned in the wall of water that surged over the city in the wake of a 120 mile an hour gale and torrential rains.

Work Done by Artists of The Delaware Valley in Addition to Drawings

The annual fall exhibition of paintings will be held at the Phillips Mill, New Hope, beginning Saturday, and lasting through the month of October. It will be open to the public daily and there will be no admission charge. It follows the Bredin Memorial show which was highly successful both in attendance and in sales of several large paintings.

Over one hundred oil paintings by artists of the Delaware River Valley will be exhibited in addition to many drawings and water color sketches. The work shown is quite diversified, representing various phases and tendencies in the American art of painting. Careful selections have been made from about four hundred pieces submitted by eighty resident artists.

All work has been chosen by the art jury. In selecting this work, a high standard of judgment has been followed in an endeavor to offer the public an exhibition representing the highest quality of workmanship and creative efforts. The committee of selection consists of John F. Follinsbee, chairman; Inez McCombs and Bernard Badora; this committee is assisted by Rolf W. Bauman and C. A. ## CHICAGO'S "BRAIN TRUST"

President Roosevelt has in Mayor Kelly of Chicago a rival in resorting to professors for the solving of difficult problems of government.

The President has his NRA and Mayor Kelly his CRA, or Chicago Recovery Administration. The "brain trust" which will man it embraces some noted educators, including President Hutchins of Chicago University, President Scott of Northwestern, and President Wilson of Loyola. In addition, it has a representative of labor, the head of the Civic Federation and Bureau of Public Efficiency and the president of the Northwestern railroad.

The chief immediate problem this group will tackle will be the city's muddled finances, which have defied the efforts of other leading minds. The mayor hopes that they will be able to eliminate the real estate tax and suggest other revenue sources to take its place. This, he thinks, would bring about a building boom.

In turning to educators, the mayor is following the example of the national administration. It is too early yet to judge the success of the latter's efforts, but the Chicago experiment will be watched with interest by other cities facing difficult financial and other problems. Some good may come out of it unless the educators themselves turn politicians and view municipal matters through the eyes of these.

THE MEDICINE CABINET

Although the purpose of the home medicine cabinet is the protection of health and life, it frequently becomes a source of illness and even death.

The handling of poisons seems to have ample safeguards thrown around it everywhere except in the home. Utmost care is used by the manufacturer who makes it, the physician who prescribes it and the druggist who dispenses it. But as soon as it reaches the home, the safeguards seem to break down. The box or bottle is placed in the medicine cabinet along with a conglomeration of other boxes, bottles and whatnots.

Along may come a child whose attention is attracted to the mysterious collection, and before the mother or father is aware of it a poisonous tablet may have been swallowed. Even adults are not immune to the serious possibilities of the medicine cabinet. Reaching for a harmless remedy in the dark, or with attention diverted elsewhere, may bring fatal results to the man or woman doing the reaching. Many such cases are on record.

The danger is a real one. It is so real that the United States public health service has taken recognition of it in a warning in which it declares that the average person "messes up everything from common baking soda to bichloride of mercury tablets, despite the fact that doctors have issued warnings about the danger of having poisons in the home."

If poisons must be kept in the home, the proper way, of course, is to segregate them and to see that they are out of the reach of exploring children. Equal care should be taken to see that they are so placed that there will be no danger of a person mistaking them for a harmless remedy.

He who laughs first laughs last often.

SYNOPSIS

"Big Jeff" Randolph, now in his second year on the great Thorndyke Varsity team, is the talk of the football world—he'll be an all-time back before he's through, etc., etc. But to the folks back home in Athens, a tiny midwest factory town . . . particularly to his Mom and Pop . . . the great "Jeff" was always little Tommy who was such a sensation on the local high school team that many colleges sought him favor until finally he picked swanky Thorndyke, a far-famed eastern university. Tommy is the social and sartorial sensation back home much to the neighbors' scorn and the delight of local debutantes excepting Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the town's biggest citizen who owns the glassworks where Pop and his other son, Pete, work. Dorothy doesn't like the crude and cruel high-bat influence of Thorndyke on Tommy. She twits him about this until the ego of the young giant reaches the exploding point. . . . Meanwhile Pete and his girl friend, Steve, provide Mom with a radio and arm chair. . . . The family now is all set to hear the broadcast of the much mooted game between the Indiana State team and "my boy's" Thorndyke millionaires. . . .

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Mom shook with excitement in— as she heard the announcer's voice, just as it happened to cut in, like it was just for them:

"Big Jeff Randolph just kicked a beauty—the boys are licking up before the game, you know, and Jeff just place-kicked one from the 35-yard line—that's 45 yards in all, you know."

Uncle Louie snuffed off. "That Husing—always snuffed off." He said to Pop: "Why don't you get Me-namoe? Husing talks too fast."

"Shut up," Pop said, "and listen."

"You know Big Jeff is all set for this game today. He's had two big years as a Thorndyke fullback and today he's playing the boys from his own state—he'll want to look good in there against them, you know. All the Hoosiers within 100 miles of here are in Thorndyke Stadium today folks. . . . The Indiana band is now marching on the field, spelling out Thorndyke. I think—yes, there's a T—H—now they're making the O—oh boy, I wish you could see that big bass drum on wheels and the way that Hoosier is beating it. Let's see if we can't give it some of their music."

Pop looked at Uncle Louie and smiled. "That'd be a good job for you, beating that bass drum," he said.

Uncle Louie came right back at him. "A! you'd do good on that flute," Pop took it good-natured enough for he knew what Uncle Louie meant, all right. Pop had an old flute up in the attic and he'd been trying to play it for twenty years but never stayed at it. Uncle Louie kept right on: "And if it wasn't for you we'd be right there looking at them right now instead of listening to that box."

Mom was afraid of that; but before she could say anything Pop came right back at him: "Sure you would; but I'm funny that way—I'm one of them that believes in taking care of a job when I've got one."

Uncle Louie didn't accept the hint. "You wouldn't have lost your job—he'd kept it for you."

"Sure—and I suppose he'd give me the two days' pay, too—and paid the bills and all that."

"Sure he would."

Pop said, "Well, I'm one of them that believes in paying my own bills and working for what I get."

Big Jeff (erstwhile Tommy) is fit for the sidelines, stiff-arming one . . .

the announcer broke in again. "Listen," she said, "you're missing something."

"—the teams are off the field now, back to the clubhouse for final instructions and the old pep talk. The Thorndyke band is marching now—but these bands over here don't begin to match the boys out West. Here's the lineup, official. I'll start with Indiana. Got your pencil and paper? All right, we'll start with left end. Ready?"

Uncle Louie snorted. "Go on, you dummy, start if you're going to and quit talking about it. You like to hear yourself talk."

"He gets paid good for talking," Pop said.

The kitchen door opened and Mom thought maybe Pete had come from the garage to listen but who was it but Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Flannigan, with their shawls over their shoulders and heads because it was right cold.

"We just thought we'd come and listen awhile," said Mrs. Johnson. "Sure," said Mrs. Flannigan, "on account of Tommy—that is if you're sure we ain't in the way."

They had already sat down and Mom really wished they hadn't come because they might be disorderly; but then it was real neighborly of them and Mom always believed in being nice to neighbors when they came in her house even if she didn't go around gossiping herself. So she said: "No indeed, you won't be in the way—just let me have your shawls and make yourself right to home. The lineup is just coming in now."

"I just said to Mrs. Flannigan," said Mrs. Johnson, "that I'd rather listen at Mrs. Randolph's than across the street because over there we'd be hearing too many remarks, don't you know?"

"And I just thought the same thing," said Mrs. Flannigan, nodding her gaunt shoulders with her bony head and smiling at Uncle Louie. He didn't answer nor even look at her.

"Yes," continued Mrs. Johnson, "since Tommy got so great I guess you—"

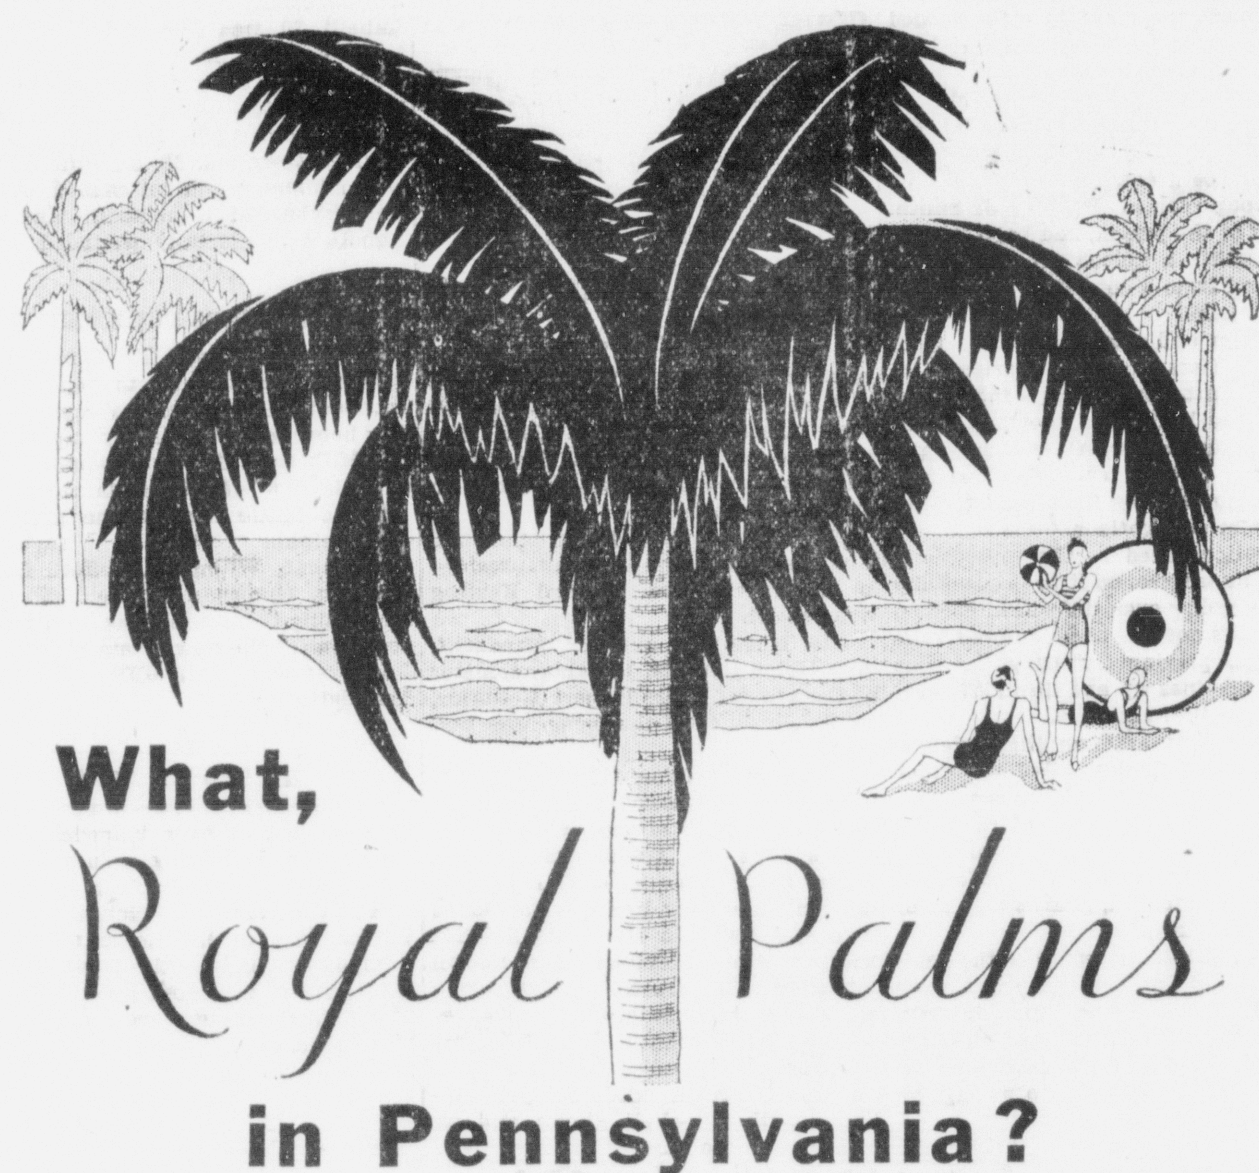

Mom put her finger to her lips and pointed to Pop who was trying to hear. Both Mrs. Flannigan and Mrs. Johnson nodded quickly and smiled and gave their attention to the game as if they understood men-folks perfectly.

"—Randolph has it, the wedge in forming, he's coming right down the middle back of it . . . they're still moving—Jeff's cut away from them and is hitting for the sidelines—two men out there—he stiff-arms the first and now only Jake Coffman of Indiana is in his path—oh boy, oh boy, oh boy, what a tackle. Jake spoiled him and they went out of bounds on the Thorndyke 40-yard line. Coffman saved a sure touchdown the time . . . Big Jeff was on his way. All right—got your charts ready? Thorndyke's ball, first down on their own 40. The field is lightning fast and the slight wind will bother nobody. Thorndyke's lining up, unbalanced line—Randolph back—they use the Warner system, you know . . . Indiana's using square defense in the backfield, all four men up fairly close, the center out of the line, they're massing to stop Thorndyke's shot passing game and laterals. . . . Smart maneuver—every Big Jeff Randolph will have to step to get through that defense. . . . There he goes—it's a lateral—uh—the end got him . . . about three yards—second and seven—too many red-shirts in his way that time and they wouldn't be moved out. . . . They're lining up again—the ball is passed—Jeff's running wide—he's dropping back—oh, it's a beauty, it's a pass, a long pass straight down the middle, over the head of the Indiana backfield, a Thorndyke man is racing for it—he's got it—he's clear—two men are chasing him but they can't catch him—he's over. It's a TOUCHDOWN! Listen to this crowd. . . . can you hear me? Davis scored that touchdown after catching a beautiful pass from Big Jeff Randolph on the second play—a 57-yard gain. . . ."

Pop was winking at Mom, his ear close to the radio. Uncle Louie was smiling—it wasn't often he smiled anymore. Mrs. Flannigan and Mrs. Johnson were smiling too like they knew all about it but Mom knew they didn't know anymore about it than she did—except that she knew Tommy had done something great again and her heart was warm with pride. Everybody was talking but Pop put up his hand.

FURMAN A. C. ELEVEN TO OPEN SEASON SUNDAY

The Furman A. C. football team, after three weeks of intensive practice, is ready for its opening game.

Sunday afternoon, at Beverly, N. J., the team will help the stalwarts of Beverly A. C. usher in their gridiron season.

Last year, under the name of the White Elephants, the team was crowned Philadelphia northeast district and Bristol independent champions. Most of the men from last year's team are back, and also plenty of new material has been acquired.

Coach "Dom" Dougherty has been putting his proteges through some stiff work-outs, so the boys will have no trouble next Sunday. This week will be devoted to putting the finishing touches to the machine, with plenty of punting and passing, leading the workouts. The squad called upon to represent the club this season consists of: Unruh, Cummons, Moore, Marshall, Shields, Johnson, T. Barrett, in the backfield; Brown, McDevitt, Zeffer, at the end positions; P. Barrett, Stackhouse, Walker, as tackles; Wilson, Gallagher, McVaine, Perkins, Gosline, as guards, and Carnvale and McGee will swap the center positions.

HIGH SCHOOL PREPARES FOR LA SALLE CONTEST

By Jack Orr

(Asst. Pub. Rep. of B. H. S.)

After successfully meeting their initial test by defeating the Upper Moreland eleven, the Bristol High School football squad started practice for its opening home game which will be Saturday. Their opponent will be the strong La Salle aggregation from Philadelphia.

The La Salle game should be a close struggle as both teams are evenly matched. Coach "Snapper" McLaughlin, former Villanova quarterback and a student of the Rockne system, is building his offense around Captain Howard Leary, one of the best backs in scholastic ranks, a triple threat man. The line will be strong with Farrell, Magee, Predigin, Ewan, and McGarry back. Some of the other positions are open, but many capable boys are out and performing in great style. The La Salle contest will be a hard one, and although the Bristol boys performed fairly well on Saturday they should not feel over-confident as this game is no set-up.

The practice this week has been very light without pads, and likewise no scrimmage on account of the intense heat. The weakness in the kicking has caused some new boys to come out for the punting position, among these are "Joe" Conti, who is doing quite well.

The season tickets have been put on sale and for a bargain price may be had from any student.

Manhattan Company Has Added Products To Line

Establishing a plant here for the manufacture of soap six years ago, the Manhattan Soap Company has expanded its business to the point where today it manufactures four toilet soaps, a hard-water soap, and soap flakes; with two or three products still in embryo form. In addition there is another toilet soap which will be placed on the market within the next month.

The steady advancement of this manufacturing enterprise here has been brought about as the result of excessive research work, and ultimately called for increased facilities and employees.

When locating here six years ago, the firm which was established in 1890, and whose main office is in New York City, was placing on the market one toilet soap, the famed "Sweet-heart," and "Coaline," a hard-water and salt-water soap. These products were shipped to all parts of the United States, and as new products were gradually added these too commanded leads in the markets.

Among the new additions which Bristol people are helping to manufacture, and which are used by people throughout the country, are: "Devodia," a French-milled toilet soap, pleasingly perfumed, with the colorful cakes wrapped in cellophane in packages of three; "Skin Balm Health Soap," known for its deodorizing properties; and Sweetheart flakes for all household uses.

Within the next month, "Palm," another pleasing toilet soap, will be at the disposal of the public.

The fourth toilet soap is foremost with children and greatly prized by them. This is "Mickey Mouse Soap," which through arrangements with Walt Disney of "Mickey Mouse" fame, will be marketed in two forms, large single cakes, cellophane-wrapped, and in attractive packages of six small cakes. On each cake of "Mickey Mouse Soap," there appears a figure, either "Mickey," "Minnie," or one of their pals, in the form of a cow, horse or dog. The figures are placed on the cakes by means of decalcomania, and the comic label remains as the soap wears. The product is in white, with figures in bright colors.

The addition of the new products to the items manufactured by Manhattan Company has provided a wider market for Bristol goods, and also afforded employment for many localities.

Leniency For Family In Attempted Fraud

Croydon. Several witnesses testified she was not capable of handling her own affairs.

Warning out-of-the-county business people that when engaged in making money in Bucks county they must obey the laws, Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Monday afternoon told a Philadelphia business woman "you made your money in this county but you did not want to obey our laws" before pronouncing sentence.

Found guilty of removing goods under levy, Fannie Strobach, who operated a meat market and grocery store in Croydon, was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, pay a sum of $25 in cash and the balance of the debt, including the total amount of $168.30, in installments of not less than $10 per week.

Her son, Albert, was given a suspended sentence. The jury recommended leniency, and the father, Max Strobach, was also given a suspended sentence.

The original bill amounted to $129.62. Following a levy on the contents of the store by Constable Thomas Crawford, the defendants attempted, and did remove, according to the evidence, some of the contents before a sale could be held.

Fannie Strobach, an Austrian, told the Court she had never been in any previous trouble or crime. Her husband admitted he had served thirty days when arrested as a number racket devotee.

Jacob Zskoos, of Springtown, was before Judge Keller on a charge of aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery, wantonly pointing a firearm and carrying a firearm without a license. He was convicted on all charges except aggravated assault and battery. Judge Keller sentenced him to pay the costs and placed him on probation for one year, directing him to keep the peace with Jacob Weiss, a former employer, and Dr. Alexander Deutsch, of Allentown. County Detective Antonio Russo was named as probation officer.

Testimony was presented that showed that Zskoos got into an argument with Weiss while working on his farm and during the fight, pulled out a revolver and pointed it at Weiss. The pistol was taken away from Zskoos by Dr. Deutsch, who was visiting Weiss at the time.

Two Croydon youths, Joseph Rivells and Charles Boyer, witnesses for the Commonwealth, testified they saw various people remove merchandise from the Strobach store.

The latter told the Court he saw Albert Strobach enter the store and leave with knives and saws in his hand. He said he reported the movement to a neighbor of his who owned the store.

August Kreuner, also a resident of Croydon, who passed the store on August 4, testified he noticed fixtures, belonging to an ice box, and meat blocks and groceries on the pavement.

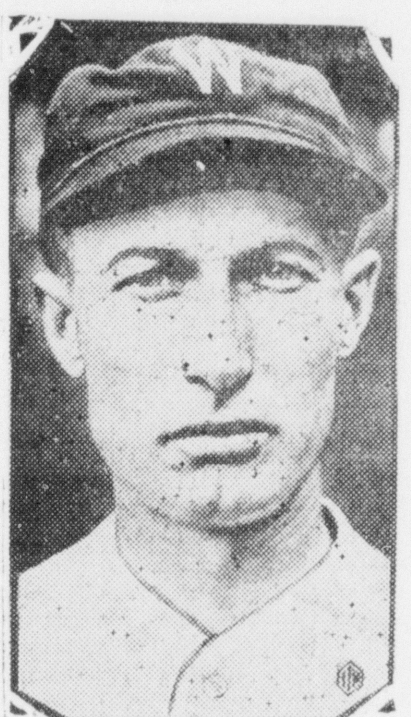

Max Strobach, one of the defendants, stated he came to the store to meet his wife and take her home. Albert Strobach, 18, son of Max Strobach, admitted removing two saws and a small knife from the premises. His mother, Fannie, a member of the trio charged with removing goods under levy, did not take the stand.

The defendants were represented by Maxwell Kahn, a member of the Philadelphia bar.

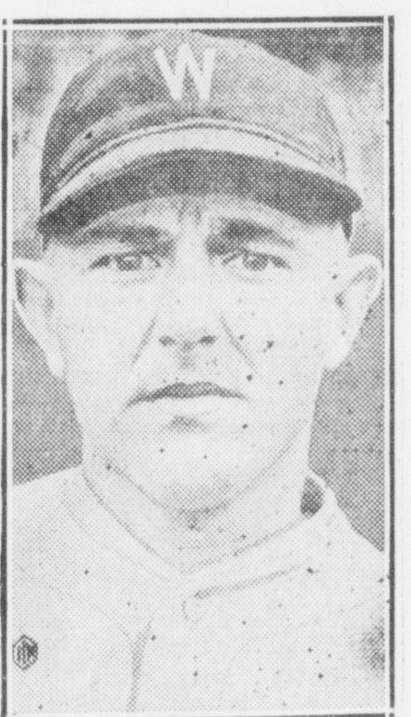

Alex McColl

Though Alex McColl is 37 he is just a rookie pitcher with the Senators. For McColl came up to the big leagues for the first time this season after having played minor league ball for 19 years. He joined the Senators two months ago.

Sam Rice

Sam Rice is the real veteran of the Senators having been with the team eighteen years. He was a regular at third base until Goose Goslin supplanted him this season.

Alvin Crowder

Alvin Crowder, veteran mainstay of the Washington pitching staff, is one of the hardest working hurlers in baseball. Last season he started in 39 games and twirled a total of 327 innings. He won twenty-six games, and set a winning streak of fifteen in a row. His 1933 record is just as impressive.

Big Little Men

By BURNLEY

WARBURTON - of So California
—THIS PINT-SIZED 150-POUNDER IS RATED AS THE BEST
OPEN FIELD BALL CARRIER IN THE FAR WEST!

WHEN you're looking for giants in sports, don't overlook the little fellows. This year there are two mites who loom larger than a lot of fellows who carry double their weight, and both of them are conspicuous for their accomplishments as well as for their startlingly small stature. We're talking about Bryan Grant, the Atlanta tennis ace, and Irv Warburton, Southern California's gridiron flash.

When Grant came to Forest Hills for the Men's Nationals and found himself just within the class of seeded players as Number 10, he raised his voice and let it be known that he thought he deserved a better rating. The crowd at Forest Hills heard him, unheeding. They found out he was right a little later on.

Grant went out to do battle against the lank and lanky defending champion, Ellsworth Vines, for the match that would put one of them in the quarter finals, determined to back up his protests. They presented a strange contrast. Vines is tall and long-legged; Grant is a little fellow who is barely five feet three inches in height and weighs some 118 pounds. They call him "Bitsy."

The result of their match is tennis history. "Bitsy" mowed down the champion in three straight sets—the only man in tennis ever to put a defending champion out of the running before the quarter-final round.

After the match the Forest Hills gentlemen were rather inclined to believe Grant's previous statements on the matter of seeding. Then they recalled that he had already beaten some of the best players in the game, including Frank Shields, Frankie Parker, Sydney Wood, Gregory Mangin and John Van Ryn.

Grant will show up high in the national ratings this year, and he deserves a good place. Only one other little fellow in tennis can be compared with him—Little Bill Johnston, who got along pretty well on the courts despite his brief stature. It looks as if Grant is headed for the greater heights, too.

Out on the coast they'll tell you that little fellows can get along nicely, and they'll point to Irv Warburton, the great ball carrier of the champion Southern California eleven. Warburton weighs about 150 pounds and plays with and against men renowned for their height and bulkiness. The coast turns out the best football material from the point of physique in all the country, you know.

Yet little Irv Warburton flashes out ahead of them with the ball tucked under his arm and flees through the ponderous opposition like a Jack rabbit. This white-haired lad, dubbed "Cotton," is the great Trojan threat this year, and on his slight shoulders and dexterous legs, to a great extent, hang the Trojan chances of retaining the championship.

They had a boy like him in the East once—Albie Booth. Little fellows CAN travel.
